Effective advocacy is built upon a complex and diverse set of skills, ranging from comprehensive legal research to the ability to develop and present a persuasive narrative that will advance the party’s case. A truly qualified advocate should possess the intelligence, diligence and skills in the art. While most believe that great advocates are born and not made, advocacy – like any other skills – may be honed and refined through practice and experience.

Enhance and improve your skills in preparing and executing a winning representation. This seminar will assist you to better comprehend the essential elements of the art of advocacy (both from the Bench’s perspective, as well as the Practitioners’), and provide a platform upon which you can develop your advocacy skills.
